

ABSTRACT

This invention relates to novel processes for preparing heteroaryl-substituted urea compounds of formula (I):

5

(I)

which are useful for treating diseases and pathological conditions involving inflammation such as chronic inflammatory disease. X, Ar, L, Q and are described herein.

10